

Abstract

Rotary drive, especially to adjust a moving part in the motor vehicle, with a rotor positioned with bearings in a housing, which is supported with at least one front (end) face axially on a supporting member, which is attached via a form closure on the housing, whereby the supporting member has radial crosspieces, which can be turned into the housing and thereby create their own chamfers (flutes).